

ABSTRACT

The invention discloses a new biological test system including a biological monitor which can transmit the processed data, analog or digital signals, via a communication port, whether USB, serial or parallel, 5 and a communication media such as telephone, computer or PDA, to the internet server for data analysis and storage. The computer or PDA may download the software for data analysis on line from the web-station without transmitting the data to the internet server.

10